1. God emphasizes His sovereignty over all with a review of the uniqueness of a number of the _____ He created.

- a. The Lord's _____ sovereignty is illustrated by His provision for lions and ravens. (38:39-41)

* We have no right to accuse God of unkindness when He tenderly _____ for inferior creatures.

- b. The Lord's _____ sovereignty is illustrated by His knowledge of the time of the birth of mountain goats. (39:1-4)

* We do not always understand God's _____, but we can be confident that He knows best.

- c. The Lord's _____ sovereignty is illustrated by animals that man cannot control like the wild donkey and wild ox (39:5-12); animals that are not very smart like the ostrich (39:13-18); and animals that are of great use to man like the horse (39:19-25).

* We cannot _____ nor always understand God's providential work in our lives.

"O how ravishing and delectable a sight will it be to behold at one view the whole _____ of Providence, and the proper place and use of every single act, which we could not understand in this world!" - John Flavel

- d. The Lord's _____ sovereignty is illustrated by the controlling instincts He has given to the hawk and the eagle (39:26-30).

"These and many such instances of natural power and sagacity in the inferior creatures, which we cannot account for, oblige us to _____ our own weakness and ignorance and to give glory to God as the fountain of all being, power, wisdom, and perfection." - Matthew Henry

2. The servants of God are called on to _____ to the Lord and humbly trust Him.

*"Job's faith may not enable him to fathom the mysteries of God, nor to solve the riddles of His providence. He may not comprehend how these things are. But he knows that God is all-perfect and all-glorious, and he has that _____ in Him which assures him that these things must be so."
- William Henry Green*
